About Medical Coding Training Program

What is Medical Coding?

Medical coding is the transformation of healthcare diagnosis, procedures, medical services, and equipment into universal medical alphanumeric codes. The diagnoses and procedure codes are taken from medical record documentation, such as transcription of physician's notes, laboratory and radiologic results, etc.

- Medical necessity for treatments, services, or supplies the patient received.
- Treatments, services, and supplies provided to the patient.
- Any unusual circumstances or medical condition that affected those treatments and services.

Topics Covered:

- Human Anatomy & Physiology
